INDESIGN | PHOTOSHOP | ILLUSTRATOR | RHINO

BRIEF: Our job was to design and develop a brand that had the environment foremost in mind. The final product would need to be either reusable or recyclable. We also wrote a marketing plan to successfully launch the product both online and in Vancouver.

CHALLENGE: Designing an eye catching product that is environmentally friendly in every respect. Additionally, create a design which stands out and introduces customers to the new product.

SOLUTION: Alaïa is a sustainable lifestyle brand creating sophisticated and timeless pieces. Consideration is given to every detail of the brand, artisanship, materiality and lasting value. They partner with people they believe make the world a better place.

Alaïa's goal is to deliver high quality, 100% sustainable soy candles to consumers which can be reused as planters. Alaïa promotes sustainability by educating consumers on the benefit of long lasting renewable goods. Our goal is to eliminate the current single use, throw away culture.

To promote the idea of sustainability and celebrate the launch, Alaïa will host a "Candle Making" event, at the pop-up location in Downtown Vancouver's Nordstrom. When people buy a product at the pop-up, they will be given free samples of mini scent bottles to share with others. Canadian chef Ned Bell, known for his sustainable responsible approach to seafood will be catering the event.

STUDIO APP APP PROTOTYPE - SCHOOL PROJECT XD | INDESIGN

BRIEF: The brief was to design a completely functional prototype of an app. The app needed to be developed after thorough market research through surveys and user interviews.

CHALLENGE: The main challenge for this brief was to work through the ideation process to create a unique application platform that could succeed in a real life setting.

SOLUTION: Studio is an app for creative individuals to inspire, showcase and connect with other creators. It will help narrow their job search and be able to apply directly through the app. Users can create more than one resume making it feasible to apply to different jobs with different requirements.

In the initial phase, primary and secondary research, through surveys and information online was recorded in a report. In the second phase, user persona, key features and user flow was defined. Finally, a paper wireframe was created and digitized in XD. The wireframes were modified thrice before the final app was designed, and each time users were brought in to test the app and provide feedback.

CDPC: CANADIAN DRUG POLICY COALITION CAMPAIGN DESIGN - SCHOOL PROJECT INDESIGN | PHOTOSHOP | XD

BRIEF: Our task was to orchestrate a campaign for a nonprofit organization of our choosing. We needed to write a report based on our research and form a well rounded campaign for our target audience.

CHALLENGE: Developing a campaign from scratch whilst ensuring its beneficial and informative enough to encourage people to take action.

SOLUTION: With the recent call to awareness regarding opioids, I decided to further the cause by designing a campaign "Getting to Tomorrow: Emerging from the Opioid Poisoning Crisis".

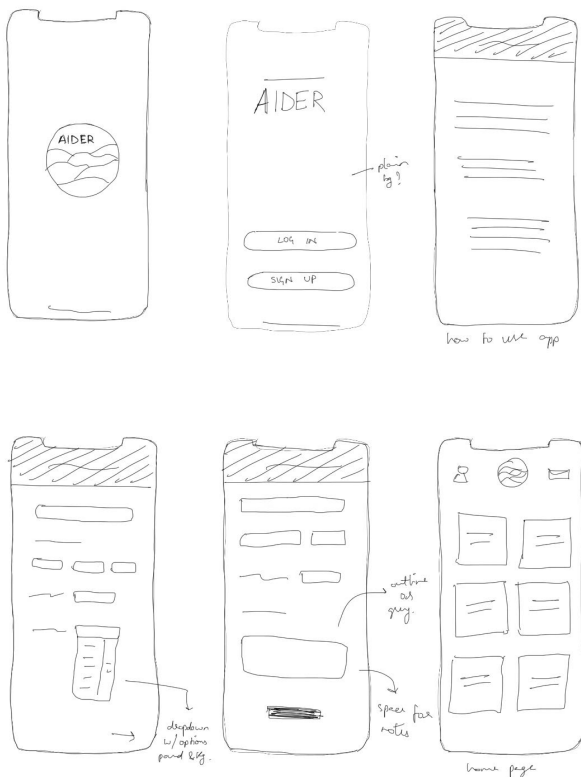

Following weeks of in-depth research on the NGOs work, history, demographics and competitors, I outlined a two-phase plan. The campaign will be based in Vancouver and will cater to a target audience aged 20-49 years.

Phase I is to generate discussion through interaction with a public art piece installed in key locations around Downtown Vancouver.

Phase II is to launch posters with strong relatable messages and imagery. It will be followed by the launch of an app named Aider for people who need guidance and support. It will aid people who use opioid and circumvent potential overdoses.

SHIFT MAGAZINE EDITORIAL DESIGN - SCHOOL PROJECT INDESIGN | PHOTOSHOP | AFTER EFFECTS

BRIEF: The project required us to design an engaging layout for a magazine with a strong concept, whilst following a grid.

CHALLENGE: Creating a professionally structured magazine, with a minimum of 12 pages and an infographic relevant to the concept.

SOLUTION: Shift is an English-language monthly magazine showcasing street art and gives artists a platform to be a source of inspiration. It is a combination of analog photography and bold typography to represent the magazines concept inspired by Andy Warhol; "Art is anything you can get away with."

It features interviews of local as well as international artists. The magazine explores art of all mediums through letters, interviews and portfolio expositions. Beginners will aspire to excel after reading this inspirational publication and will take heart when they realize that even the most proficient of artists will never be satisfied with their work. Each issue contains an art print for the buyers to tear off and frame. The reason to include this is to give buyers more of an incentive to purchase Shift.

Martin Watson is a Norwegian street artist best known for his calligraphic scribbles in grayscale voids. Over the past couple years, Martin has developed an unmistakable abstract style and movement, with figurative stencilled compositions. His works can be seen to mirror the rise and fall of the street, as he symbolically recreates the urban environment with delicate and organic characters feature, then vandalises it to reveal his bright and vibrant transformations.

Growing up in Oslo Norway, Martin was an active part of the emerging graffiti scene of the early 90s which at the time maintained zero tolerance. The physical architecture of the city was a constant inspiration, the elaboration and destruction of each generation contributing to the urban infrastructure.

The same processes can be seen in his creative influences of Jose Parla and Cy Twombly. In the early 2000s, this interest in layers became more literal with the introduction of stencils into his work. The evolution moved him closer to a simple yet deeply effective aesthetic he believed could bridge the gap between the passion and spontaneity of graffiti and for him, in all his works, the relationship between vulnerability and strength showed remains constant. This balance would come to define his creative approach and style.

BODYEASE THERAPIES BRANDING CLIENT PROJECT ILLUSTRATOR | INDESIGN

BRIEF: The project brief was to design a logo for a small business named Bodyease Therapies which is located in Bailiwick of Jersey, UK. Bodyease Therapies is a massage studio specializing in sports related injuries and myofascial release therapy. The client was looking for something simple yet bold that captured the true essence of her work.

CHALLENGE: There were several design restrictions concerning the logo. The client did not want any florals, hands, religious signs or symbols. The client did not want to use the colours orange and purple. The logo needed to look sophisticated yet friendly.

The client was presented with three concepts from which she chose one. The idea behind this concept was to incorporate a human into the logo.

After the initial concept was selected, many more explorations were done. The use of different typefaces was to create emphasis on the word "ease."

This is the final logo the client selected. It met all the requirements and worked well within the brand restrictions.

To extend her brand identity, we designed a simple pattern, influenced by the shapes in the logo.

SOLUTION: In the research phase of the project, we discovered her target audience and interviewed her clients to get a good understanding of the brand. After doing over a 100 sketches for the logo, we narrowed it down to three main concepts and further iterated on one.

To give the brand identity an extension, we developed a pattern, inspired from the shapes present in the logo, that the client could use on her business supplies such as calenders, books, totes, etc.
